NEWS

Mattis: US military teams may go to North Korea to look for more war remains

Hours after a U.S. Air Force C-17 returned from North Korea with the first U.S. war remains to come back in years, Defense Secretary Jim Mattis said that relations between the two countries may be warming to the point that he could forsee U.S. forces returning there to find more.

Mattis said recent overtures to North Korean leader Kim Jong Un, including President Donald Trump's summit with Kim in Singapore last month, had dramatically changed a relationship that has been frozen for years. The return of the remains was seen as an important step in actions both sides have taken to reduce tension on the Korean peninsula. The U.S. has suspended its military exercises with South Korea as part of the U.S. terms of the agreement.

Russian Jamming Poses a Growing Threat to U.S. Troops in Syria

American troops deployed in Syria are increasingly having to defend themselves against Russian jamming devices—electronic attacks with potentially lethal consequences, according to U.S. military officials and analysts.

Officers who have experienced the jamming—known as electronic warfare—say it's no less dangerous than conventional attacks with bombs and artillery. But they also say it's allowing U.S. troops a rare opportunity to experience Russian technology in the battlefield and figure out how to defend against it.

NATO intercepted a Russian plane over the Black Sea. So why weren't US F-15s in nearby Romania used?

CAMPIA TURZII, Romania — Despite a Thursday intercept of a Russian bomber by U.K. fighter jets conducting the air-policing mission over Romania, the U.S. Air Force F-15 squadron temporarily deployed just 300 miles away at Campia Turzii doesn't expect to get involved in that effort anytime soon, its commander told Defense News on July 27.

According to the British Royal Air Force, a Russian Sukhoi Su-24 was flying westward over the Black Sea nearing NATO airspace when it was intercepted by U.K. Eurofighter Typhoons, which are temporarily deployed to Romania's Mihail Kogalniceanu Air Base as part of the enhanced air-policing initiative.

US confirms drones in Niger have striking capabilities

DAKAR, Senegal — The United States started arming drones in the West African nation of Niger earlier this year, according to the U.S. Africa Command.

"In coordination with the Government of Niger, U.S. Africa Command has armed intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance (ISR) aircraft already in Niger to improve our combined ability to respond to threats and other security issues in the region. Armed ISR aircraft began flying in early 2018," Samantha Reho, spokeswoman for U.S. Africa Command, told The Associated Press.

After deadly Niger ambush, US military in Africa says changes made to protect troops

DAKAR, Senegal — The U.S. military in Africa has taken steps to increase the security of troops on the ground, adding armed drones and armored vehicles and taking a harder look at when American forces go out with local troops, the head of the U.S. Africa Command said Monday.

Gen. Thomas D. Waldhauser told reporters the U.S. also has cut the response time needed for medical evacuations — the result of a broad review in the wake of last year's ambush in Niger that killed four U.S. soldiers and four of their Niger counterparts.

Lawmakers demand Pentagon drops GI Bill transfer limits

WASHINGTON — A bipartisan group of 83 House lawmakers are blasting a Defense Department plan to change rules on troops transferring their GI Bill benefits to dependents, calling it unfair and devastating for military morale.

“Once a service member meets the requirements for transferring Post-9/11 GI Bill benefits to an eligible family member, we must uphold our end of the commitment,” the group stated in a letter to Defense Secretary Jim Mattis last week. “This change in policy is unacceptable, and we call upon you to swiftly reverse this decision.”
